Dear Friends:

I am proud to present the 2008 Idaho Humanities Council Annual Report. This report is a summary of the Council’s commitment to our mission of engaging people with ideas in Idaho by inspiring a more literate, tolerant, and intellectually engaged citizenry. It presents the work of the Council’s collaborative projects and programs funded in 2008. From IHC’s first Eastern Idaho Distinguished Humanities Lecture in Idaho Falls in February of 2008 to the Benefit Reception, Idaho Public Television and Cour d’Alene Press for serving as media sponsors.

Outstanding Achievement in the Humanities Award

The IHC honored Idaho State University History Professor Ron Hatenbuehler with IHC’s 2008 Award for “Outstanding Achievement in the Humanities” in February of 2009 at ISU in Pocatello. The IHC annually recognizes an individual or organization for outstanding contributions that promote greater public awareness, appreciation, and understanding of the humanities in Idaho. The IHC board selected Hatenbuehler to receive the award because of his contributions as a history professor, scholar, and for his interest in bringing the humanities to Idaho’s broader public audience. Hatenbuehler was honored for his contributions as a history professor, scholar, and his interest in bringing the humanities to Idaho’s broader public audience.

Outstanding Teaching of the Humanities Award

Wendell Berry’s "Between Fences," a Smithsonian Institution traveling exhibition, toured Idaho from September of 2008 through July 2009. It explored the multiple meanings behind the fence and how tightly we are bound by it. We are pulled together, but we are pulled apart by the fence, too. The exhibition included text, images, and compelling stories. "Between Fences" is a series of award-winning primetime specials examining the lives, works, and creative processes of America’s most outstanding cultural artists. History Detectives is devoted to exploring the complexities of historical mysteries, searching out the facts, myths, and legends that connect local folklore, family legends, and interesting objects.

Distinguished Humanities Lectures and Dinners

Boise ABC News Chief White House Correspondent Martha Raddatz gave the 12th Annual Distinguished Humanities Lecture in late October to more than 600 people. Raddatz spoke about her experiences reporting on the Iraq War, visiting with American troops, and observing communities and people in Iraq and Afghanistan. Thanks to the OfficeMax Boise Community Foundation for generously sponsoring the evening, to Bank of the Cascades for sponsoring the Benefactor Reception and to media sponsors Boise State Radio, the Idaho Statesman and Idaho Public Television.

Cour d’Alene: Jean Williams, National Public Radio Senior correspondent and author of many books including Obama’s “Listen, America’s Civil Rights Years, 1954-1965,” spoke about his experience as a journalist and his residential election at IHC’s 5th Annual Northern Idaho Distinguished Humanities Lecture in early October at the Cour d’Alene Resort. Earlier in the day, he spoke to 350 students at Lake City High School. Thanks to Idaho Forest Group and Sterling Savings Bank for sponsoring the evening, the Hagadone Corporation for sponsoring the Benefactor Reception, Idaho Public Television and Cour d’Alene Press for serving as media sponsors.

Special Projects

The Idaho Humanities Council also supported several special projects in 2008. Partnering with Idaho Public Television, IHC contributed $4,000 to help underwrite the statewide airings of American Masters: is a series of award-winning primetime specials examining the lives, works, and creative processes of America’s most outstanding cultural artists. History Detectives is devoted to exploring the complexities of historical mysteries, searching out the facts, myths, and legends that connect local folklore, family legends, and interesting objects.

IHC continues its support of the Idaho Falls City Club with a $4,500 award for its second season (2008-2009). The monthly luncheons feature a variety of speakers and are broadcast by KISU of Idaho State University. These programs provide opportunities for civic dialogue on many issues important to Idaho and the nation. The Idaho State Historical Society, the Idaho Heritage Trust, and the Idaho Humanities Council made the first-ever collaborative award of $15,000 to the Bannock County Historical Museum in Sandpoint in recognition of excellence in historical preservation and interpretive work on the local level. Each organization contributed $5,000 to help support the museum’s plan to expand its web-based archive of photographs and documents, making historical research more accessible to the public.

Sincerely,

Anne Voillequé

2008 Grants for Public Projects, Research Fellowships, K-12 Teacher Projects, and Planning

MINI AND MAJOR GRANTS:

Note: Many grants were awarded in FY 2008, though the programs did not occur until 2009.

Idaho Botanical Garden, Inc. (Boise) received $9,525 to help support a summer speaker series. The Ada Community Library (Boise) was awarded $1,000 to bring a guest speaker to Boise for presentations during the “Big Read” program in spring of 2009. The program was designed to inspire discussion of a citywide reading of Dashiell Hammett’s The Maltese Falcon.

The Community Library (Ketchum) was awarded $1,100 to begin developing three photography exhibits to complement the Smithsonian “Museum on Main Street.” The library hosted this exhibit from May-July, 2009.

City of Stanley was awarded $1,200 to research and produce a self-guiding, historic walking tour brochure of the city, available at the Stanley Museum and Visitors Center.

The Burley Public Library (Burley) was awarded $1,200 to support a year-long family film festival at the library. The library screened classic films (some from the American Film Institute’s Top 100 film list) to families in Burley from various genres including animation, fantasy, science fiction, westerns, mystery, etc.

Weippe Community Club (Weippe) was awarded $1,500 to help bring Native American performer Dennis Los Roger to Weippe for the 7th Annual Idaho Camas Festival in May, 2008.

Northwest Nazarene University (Nampa) received $1,675 to host an exhibition of WPA photographs from the Library of Congress on the theme of “Picture Fairs” that depicted in 45 black-and-white Depression-era photographs Americans and their relationship to their various faunts.

The Janet C. Anderson Gender Resource Center at Idaho State University (Pocatello) was awarded $1,821 to help support a speaker at the multidisciplinary conference titled The Art of Everyday Life in April, 2009.

Museum of North Idaho (Coeur d’Alene) received $1,960 to support Nanica Gary Miller’s field work in Idaho’s panhandle to research, record, and preserve historically based songs of Idaho.

The University of Idaho School of Journalism and Mass Media (Moscow) received $1,941 to form an oral history project titled The Art of Everyday Life in April, 2009. Erinne’s talk’s focus was on the media coverage of U.S. environmental policies as expressed by the newly elected president.

Lewis-Clark State College (Lewiston) was awarded $2,039 to transcribe and publish a portion of a long-out-of-print book by Archie Thimney entitled See P eve, First published by the University of Columbia Press in 1934, the reprint publication, in the form of a pamphlet, will be provided to scholars, tribal mem-span, panels, and speaker presentations on topics related to the history and culture of storytelling, drumming, and song.

The Museum of Winchester History (Winchester) was awarded $2,500 to enhance the 60th anniversary commemoration in the summer of 2009 with some humanities lectures and other activities.

University of Idaho (Moscow) received $3,750 to help with its fourth annual festival exploring the life and work of American writer Ernest Hemingway. Held in September, the theme was “Hemingway in Cuba,” and explored how Hemingway’s home from 1939 until his death in Ketchum influenced his work.

Friends of Stricker, Inc. (Twin Falls) was awarded $3,256 to help identify, preserve and transfer to DVD an extensive collection of 8mm home movies taken by Gladys Stricker, daughter of 1270’s pioneers Herman and Lulu Stricker. The movies were taken around mid-20th century and capture farm and ranch activities along with the urban development of the Magic Valley.

College of Southern Idaho (Twin Falls) was awarded $3,000 to help support the third Civil Liberties Symposium, which focused on the media. Writer Geoffrey Stone delivered the symposium keynote at the June conference.

Oregon Trail Center, Inc. (Montpelier) was awarded $3,000 to help produce permanent interpretive markers that coincide with a larger exhibit in the Center is creating, the Big Hill Interpretive Project.

The Wallace District Mining Museum (Wallace) received $3,000 for digital cataloging of much of the museum’s collection. The museum has thousands of physical objects, photographs, maps, and historical documents collected over its history.

Boise State University (Boise) was awarded $3,500 to help bring Palestinian peace activist Hanan Ashrawi to Boise for a lecture. Ashrawi, a Christian Palestinian woman, was appointed by Yasser Arafat in 1991 as a spokesperson for the Palestinian delegation in the peace talks with Israel.

In 1998, Ashrawi resigned from the government in protest against political corruption, spec-fically Arafat’s handling of peace talks.

The Boise (Boise) was awarded $3,500 to bring two scholars to Boise to lecture and inspire discussion of a citywide “Big Read” of Willis Catlett’s novel My Antonio. My Antonio is an American classic that takes place in rural Nebraska and concerns a young boy’s relationship with a young Japanese girl and her poor family who immigrate to Nebraska to make a living farming.

The Idaho Commission on the Arts (Boise) was awarded $3,500 to bring Pulitzer Prize winning historian and Harvard Professor Laurel Thatcher Ulrich to Pocatello for a public lecture during Women’s History Month in March 2009. Ulrich won the Pulitzer Prize and a Bancroft Prize for her 1990 book A Midwife’s Tale: The Life of Martha Ballard, Based on Her Diary, 1785-1812.

Jerome County Historical Society (Jerome) was awarded $3,500 to begin an oral history archive project. They began profiling Jerome residents who experienced the WWI era. Those interviewed discussed their experiences during and after the war, including roles as home makers, school teachers, and soldiers.

Treasurer Valley Family YMCA (Boise) was awarded $3,500 to help support an annual government program for high school students statewide. Established in 1937, the program’s goal is to teach students how to be active citizens through a nine-month hands-on experience participating in the processes of the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the Idaho state government.

University of Idaho (Moscow) was awarded $3,500 to support the seventh annual American Indian Film Festival, Sapphire & Steel, in Moscow. The festival takes place in Moscow’s historic Keough-Whitney Theater and featured films over the course of four evenings in March 2009.

Ernest Hemingway Festival (Sun Valley) was awarded $3,750 to help with its fourth annual festival exploring the life and work of American writer Ernest Hemingway. Held in September, the theme was “Hemingway in Cuba,” and explored how Hemingway’s home from 1939 until his death in Ketchum influen-

David Thompson Bicentennial Partnership (Libby, MT) received $4,500 to support a conference in honor of Tom Thomson exploring the commemoration of the Bicentennial of Canadian explorer David Thompson’s explorations of the Pacific Northwest. The group would host the bi-centennial ceremony by the Kootenai Tribe as a two-day “Traditional Kootenai Indian Encampment.”

Exile Productions (Provo, Utah) received $4,250 to begin work on a documentary about retiring University of Idaho Classics Professor Louis Perman and the decline in Classics programs in American universities. Perman retired in 2008 after 25 years at the university, where he created a lively program in classical languages and literature, and he gained a reputation among students as an inspiring teacher.

Trailing the Sheep Cultural Heritage (Hailey) received $4,250 to help support components of its popular Trailing of the Sheep Festival held each fall in Ketchum. The 2008 festival highlighted four cultures—the Scots, Basques, Irish and Persians—through story telling.

Sawtooth Interpretive and Historical Association (Stanley) received $4,923 to help launch a weekly summer “Sawtooth Forum and Lecture Series,” which ran between June and September.

The Idaho Abraham Lincoln Bicentennial Committee (Boise) received $5,000 to help tour a traveling exhibit about “Lincoln and Idaho” throughout 2008 and 2009. The exhibit includes photographs, letters, documents, posters, and original artifacts related to Abraham Lincoln and the formation of the Idaho Territory in 1863 in the middle of the Civil War.

Idaho State Historical Museum (Boise) received $5,000 to help create a new exhibit exploring the history of Idaho Freemasonry. The exhibit chronicled the rich history of the Freemasons and their continual involvement in Idaho communities, from the early days of mining through the present.

The Idaho State Historical Society (Boise) received $5,720 to support planning of a new theme and storyline for a 9,000-square foot exhibit, Idaho: Spirit of the Land and Its People as part of a major expansion of the Idaho State Historical Museum. The exhibit focuses on people, places, and events observed from multiple perspectives and experiences.

Idaho Public Television (Statewide) received $12,100 from IHC’s special “Gift and Match” program for statewide broadcast of the 21st season of American Experience.

RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS:

David Adler, Idaho State University Political Science Professor (Pocatello), was awarded $3,500 to complete a book for the National political campaign about the rening for the role of law in America. He contends that the Presidency has become subject to few limitations in its concentration of power, and that such power is in conflict with the Constitution which grants these powers to Congress.

Maria Glazowa, Assistant Professor of Anthropology at Idaho State University (Pocatello), received $2,500 to examine historical photographs of Shoshoni life and culture from 1880-1940. Working with a Shoshone-Bannock Tribe member and fluent speaker of Shoshoni, she ethnographically described each photograph, detailing the cultural meanings of the records depicting traditional Shoshoni practices such as hunting, making cradle-boards, smoking hides, beadwork, etc.

Philip Homan, Associate Professor, Idaho State University Library (Pocatello) received $2,500 to research and write a biography of Kitty Wilkins (1857-1936), “The Horse Queen of Idaho.” The Wilkins family owned and operated the Wilkins Horse Company, a horse-trading company whose vast ranch crossed the state lines of Idaho and Nevada. Wilkins eventually became the largest breaker of horses in the west.
